DELEGATIONS

1. PRIDE Cornwall

Shaun Courtney, Director of Communications for PRIDE Cornwall, introduced the upcoming celebration of PRIDE at Cornwall for the first time.

Mr. Courtney indicated that PRIDE Cornwall is not a militant group and is not outspoken or unruly in any way. The team of executive council members have worked tirelessly to bring the recognition of this invisible minority to a higher profile to Cornwall through a series of social events. This minority is that of same sex oriented individuals, gays, lesbians, bisexuals, trans-gendered and two spirited people.

that of same sex oriented individuals, gays, lesbians, bisexuals, trans-gendered and two spirited people. Mr. Courtney presented statistics which indicate that these individuals make up for ten percent of our population.

Each year, "Pride" festivals are hold throughout the world within major cities and smaller communities. It is an opportunity both for these individuals to interact with one another and for onlookers to see that this group is the same as them in lifestyle and overall existence.

Mr. Courtney requested support from Council in order to allow these people and the rest of the population to enjoy the opportunity to celebrate their acceptance within the City of Cornwall. Mr. Courtney urged Council to voice its support more openly to other Council members and their constituents, to the Cornwall Police Service and to the media at large.

2. Heart of the City

John McDonald, Project Manager for the Heart of the City (HOTC), spoke about a gazebo and landscaping improvements planned for the corner of Pitt Second Streets, the former King George site. Mr. McDonald indicated that this improvement would draw attention to the site, making it more attractive to the public as well as to potential developers.

The proposed design plans for this site call for the creation of a building on the lot but the southwest corner was suggested as space for a parkette with the building being located behind that. Although some of the landscaping elements may be preserved should there be some development on that site, some may have to be removed, replace or modified. The gazebo and property will be maintained by the Municipal Works Services as this land is city-owned property. The project has a $15,000.00 budget which HOTC is covering through donations and other investments.
